Dear Mr. [REDACTED]

STATINTL

This is a very tardy thank you indeed, I am afraid, for participating in EA's Scholar-Diplomat Seminar and helping to make it a success.

I very much appreciate the time and effort you gave, and I hope that my delay in letting you know this has not led you to think otherwise.

Sincerely,

MEMORANDUM

TO : ~~Bureau Host Officers~~ FYI

SUBJECT: Scholar-Diplomat Seminars

The purpose of these seminars is to initiate dialogue with academicians who have professional expertise in international affairs, and to provide them with an opportunity to view our work. We also want to hear what they have to say about our foreign policies and processes so it is important for the Department officers to elicit the views of our guests as well as imparting theirs.

The key to the success of these seminars is the alert and helpful action of each Host Officer in introducing the visiting scholar to our work in the Department and in responding to his particular interests by arranging meetings with other officers in the host Bureau or elsewhere in the Department.

To permit the maximum openness, frankness, and candor, the scholars have received security clearances for "access through SECRET". This will permit them to see incoming and outgoing messages, to read policy papers, and to discuss sensitive issues. They will be briefed on our security rules during their first morning in the Department.

Several meetings of the whole group will be arranged in advance. These include meetings with the Assistant Secretary of the host Bureau and with officers in PA, INR and other Bureaus. The Public Affairs Advisor's office in the host Bureau and PA/PP will be in charge of arrangements and will keep you informed of the schedule. For a portion of the time, however, our guests will be with their individual Host Officers or pursuing appointments made by the Host Officer.

We are asking you first and foremost to provide the scholar with a full opportunity to view your work at the desk level. Secondly, in keeping with your guest's professional expertise, we ask you to make appointments for him or her to meet with other officers to discuss problems and processes. A few appointments might be made in advance where it is obvious that they fit the scholar's background, but most such appointments should be made after you get acquainted with the scholar. Experience has shown that spontaneous response to the scholar's expressions of interest is the best course to follow.

It is suggested that about a week before the seminar you call the scholar assigned to you and discuss the program. You should emphasize that we are keeping the schedule as loosely structured as possible, so that the scholar may pursue his or her own interests to the maximum extent. Solicit the scholar's initial ideas on what he/she would like to do and base your initial appointments for the scholar on those ideas.

Some of the scholars may wish to lead a discussion of research he or she has in progress in order to seek comment, criticism and suggestions from Department officers. In such instances, please notify the Seminar Coordinator so that a special meeting can be set up. While this is entirely optional for the scholars, we should welcome such initiative.

In those instances where the scholars are specifically interested in a particular country, it is hoped that you can arrange at some point during the week for the scholar to meet officers of that country's Embassy in Washington.

If at any time during the week you find your Host Officer's responsibilities too time-consuming or in conflict with your other duties, please notify the Public Affairs Advisor's office in your Bureau or call the Seminar Coordinator immediately so that assistance can be arranged.

I appreciate your willingness to serve as a Host Officer for this seminar and welcome any suggestions you may wish to pass along to me regarding this program.

Hodding Carter III
Assistant Secretary for Public Affairs
